

36-year-old Casey Hockett was diagnosed with stage 4 brain cancer in March of 2022, after several unexpected seizures led to a long hospital stay and the partial removal of a tumor. He lives at home in Durango, CO with his loving wife (his full time caretaker) and a 4-year-old son. Although they are staying strong, his diagnosis has caused significant financial and emotional stress on the family. In addition to the out-of-pocket medical and emergency expenses, the family has also experienced increased food costs, because Casey's doctors have confirmed that he has a higher chance of survival if he reaches and maintains ketosis. One of their household's biggest expenses are the supplements he has been instructed to take in order to heal fully. Casey is determined to survive and to see his son grow up.
